English

This week in English the boys wrote their own free verse poem based on the first image of our book. They were amazing and using imaginative adjectives and prepositional phrases to describe what the Polar bear was seeing.

They finished their poem from the point of view of the polar bear wondering what was happening.

What adventure do you think the Bear will have when he arrives on land?

Exciting times this week - we read some more of the book! The boys should be able to tell you what we now know about the bear...

Please log into Bug Club to share a book together.

Please sign the blue book when they read with you.

Spelling

This week we have revised the 'ea' sound - pronounced 'ee' (as in sea) and 'eh' (as in head).

Maths

This week Daisy have been working on 3D shape. They had to remember the name of the 3D shapes and identify the shape of the faces. They are making progress with the new vocabulary. They had fun looking round the class for 3D shapes in everyday items, however we failed to find Pyramids in everyday items. Can you look for it around your home?

Please log in to Mathletics and complete activities in Daisy (Not their link classes please)- please sign the blue book when they have.

With Mrs Reeves, we revised our column subtraction skills to address any misconceptions about how to work out the calculations accurately (like always putting the larger number first).

Topic

The boys have really enjoyed learning about the amazing Greeks. This week they learnt about Alexander the Great. They loved the battles that Alexander fought and how he tamed a wild horse.

Some even acted out how Alexander cut the rope of Gordium.

Why was Alexander called Alexander the Great?

Forest Fun

Today was a chilly one in the woods!

The boys chose to play with various things - the swing, the mud pit, building a drawbridge from sticks and even making objects (fishing rods, bow & arrows) with sticks too.

Each child also tried their hand at using a saw to cut a wooden disc. This will be transformed into a Christmas decoration to bring home next week.
